Hockey Post-Mortem

The problem that is holding the attention of hockey-minded folks in this part today is what to make of that 7-3 defeat that Turner Valley Oilers handed the Flyers in Saturday night's opener of the Alberta Senior Hockey League.

Personally I'm content to see that it simply means the Flyers have dropped one game and that the club as a whole needs a couple of engagements in shake it down and get all the cogs meshing correctly.

Don't be alarmed by the size of the score—it's an old peculiarity of the Alberta Senior League that games are often won by scores that look like the result of Notre Dame versus Dartmouth Post high school. Look what happened in the Lethbridge Leads in Calgary. The home team walked them 8-3. Last year it was nothing for a club to take one of these lookings and then hand a similar one back the next time the two outfits run into each other.

These big scores are more or less the result of the wide-open brand of hockey played in this circuit. All clubs figure a good offensive is the best sort of defence—and it certainly is the most pleasing so far as the fans are concerned. The sort of game in which the team that first gets a couple goals starts to back on a heavy defensive to protect a not exactly thrilling to watch.

However, there were more reasons for the Flyers' defeat than this and the Flyers were the first to admit it. With the exception of perhaps O'Keefe, Mullen and Pow, the boys were having a bad time. The breaks went against them at the start and they never were able to get going after.

Sherritt, the big defenceman who has been playing in past seasons with Herring in the English National League, got off on the wrong foot when he fell into the N. H. technique of holding. It brought him a prompt penalty and the Oilers just as promptly banded in two goals to their power play.

That sort of upset the Flyers a bit, but they managed to lie it up again on power plays when penalties were imposed on Oilers. Then Sherritt had the tough task to make that second shot from behind his right in front of the Flyer net. This goal put the Flyers behind the eight ball again. They had to open up and take the play to Turner Valley. The team waited for the breaks and made the most of every one that came along.

Had the fifth goal of the game been scored by the Flyers the final result might have been the reverse of what it was.

Mullen Earns His Board

One of the most cheerful aspects of the game so far at Edmontonians were concerned was the showing made by Patrick Riley Mullin. Mullin, former winger of Pacific Coast League, was playing under his belt. He was in the game with everything he had, rallying the team with nice judgment and doing his own chores mightily well.

"Mullen," as the boys naturally call him since his last name is Mullin, is having trouble turning off his daily menu. Playing hockey is a light light experience for this raw-boned citizen after spending 18 hours a day working on his farm during the spring, summer and fall.

"If I kept on raising now the way I did on the farm, I eat my way right out of the league in a month," Mullen explains. "I'm cutting down, but man, it's an awful temptation!"

Coach Eddie O'Keefe is in better shape than he has been for the season of the Oilers. He is a real winner. He is a real winner as far as an adage goes. It was no fault of his that his club was beaten. He was in there punching all the time and doing his job as well as any and any test.

I imagine that Eddie will get a lot of relief out of having Mullin back on defence. Eddie is the only forward with the experience and temperament to steady the front half of the club when the boys start to lull, and now Mullin will provide the same sort of reliable balance for the defence.

Joe Brown is the same fast, graceful skater that he was when he was a Superior underdog. But he didn't get the result Saturday night that he is capable of. One reason was that he wasn't used to the style of play of his line mates, O'Keefe and Yarnes. A team may practice together for months, but the boys all play a little differently when they are under fire.

Wait! McIntyre frankly admitted after the game that he had been off. "I just couldn't get going and I don't know why. I don't think I ever turned in a worse game. Probably it was because I was too anxious to make this a good one."

Let's be suffering from a bad cold. He spent all day Saturday in bed trying to throw it off and he thought he would be all right. Coach Eddie O'Keefe didn't know that Lee had been in bed all day until he saw him through the game or he would have used one of his usual reserves, probably Duchak.

However, the promising angle about all this is that every member of the club felt genuinely bad about the loss. These boys are really serious this season. There isn't one of them that doesn't want to give the very best hockey he can in every game. They just couldn't get going, though, and that is all there is to it. Sunday morning every Flyer was on hand at the arena for a hard practice in preparation for Wednesday's game here again in Calgary.

Central League Ready To Go

CENTRAL ALBERTA hockey fans will be looking forward keenly to the Central League opening shortly with five clubs, Camrose, Wetaskiwin, Stettin, Lacombe and Red Deer. This intermediate circuit was a honey last season and promises to be just as interesting this winter.

Five teams make an awkward league to draw a schedule for and if President Bob Lewis of Lacombe and his executive want a slight team from their own town, the Central League will be a happy good reason to believe. The Bears should be a mighty attractive addition to the loop.

Ottawa Riders Take 12-1 Lead Over Argos

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—(CP)—Ottawa Rough Riders, 11 playoff points up on Toronto Argonauts, are in a fair way to become 1940 champions of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

The 1939-40 Canada champions rallied to a 12-1 victory over Argos Saturday in the first game of the 12-game, best-of-five playoff and Coach Ross Trimble figured they'd be even better for next Saturday's meeting in Toronto.

For the first half Riders were no match for the Toronto team. The scullers led 1-0 in the second quarter when Griville Burke was wounded on a kick by Annis Shuck. In the third quarter Trimble sent Tony Golis and Andy Tommy in to spark Riders and that was the turning point. The payoff came when Tommy galloped 50 yards to the Argos 20. Tommy Daley carried the ball over the goal line and Herman converted.

In the last quarter, Sonny Sordy scored a 30-yard touchdown and the Argos led three points. Golis tried only once and completed four. The Argos led 12-1 at the end of the game.

Independents Attack Alberta's Bank Plan, Varsity Radio Project

Opposition to the renewal of the application for a charter to establish and operate a provincial bank was expressed in a resolution passed Saturday by Independent members of the legislature at a meeting held at the Legislative Buildings.

Considerable discussion took place with respect to the government's decision to make a further application for this bank charter, and the following resolution was unanimously passed:

"It is the opinion of the legislature that the government's action is for no other reason than to provide the government with a means of disseminating political propaganda at no cost to itself under cover of giving departmental information to the public."

Opposition to expenditure of $30,000 for extension of the University of Alberta radio facilities was expressed by the Independent members of the legislature at a meeting held at the Legislative Buildings.

The opinion was expressed that, at this time when the nation is faced with the problem of financing the war and trying by every means to secure funds to prosecute its war effort effectively, the Alberta government should not spend such a large sum of money on radio extension which may well be dispensed with.

VICTORIA, B.C., 18.—(CP)—Allan McGavin, 82, one of the founders of the Canadian chain of McGavin's bakeries, first established in Edmonton in 1912, died in hospital here Saturday.

He was born in Kilmarnock, Scotland, where he worked before coming to Canada.

His eldest son, James, a foreman baker, came to Canada to start the bakery planned by his father and his father followed him in the Dominion in 1914 and retired in 1939, selling his interest in the chain of bakeries to James.

Survivors include two sons in Edmonton, Archibald and Bert, and a son in Moose Jaw, John.

HEAVY EXPENDITURES
"It is our opinion that a chartered bank, operating as a branch of the provincial government, would serve no useful purpose, and would involve the province in heavy expenditures which are entirely unwarranted, especially at this time when all possible resources should be conserved for the purpose of our war effort."

It may be added that the experience of this province in the past has confirmed the Treasury Branches has confirmed the long standing conviction that the present financial condition of the province does not permit of the undertaking successfully any branch of the banking business.

THE resolution continuing the government's action also expressed the opinion that "the purpose being the dissemination of propaganda at no cost to itself under cover of giving departmental information to the public."

"It is reported that the government has already procured the necessary funds for the purpose of this project, which is obviously an attempt to introduce propaganda into the hands of the public."

"We are strongly of the opinion that the government should not spend such a large sum of money on radio extension which may well be dispensed with."

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

There isn't a large number of mothers who must turn over the care of their children to servants, but the proportion is large enough to be formidable.

For whether the mother is gone all day because of business or whether she is gone from morning to night intent upon civic or social work, the fact remains that the child is in the care of the servant who must work during the day.

Few mothers can afford nurses, so individuals who have made an special study of child care and training. The most one can hope for—in fact should demand—is that the servant takes children for if she does, she will do the right thing at the right time only because her emotion will dictate a sensible treatment.

One wonders just how seriously the servant herself takes her responsibilities? Does she recognize that she has a relationship to the children which is inevitable for their benefit or their detriment? Does she care what she does to the mistress is out of the house? Does she express her worst self and let her anger and emotion spill over into words, if not overt acts?

One can realize that when she expresses the ideas she promotes, may make a stronger impression upon the children, than those heard from the parents.

One individual who spends as much time with children, with generally and unobtrusively, impresses them with her will or wisdom or generosity and the children, the better—and therefore the better for the mistress and her wealth of ignorance.

Maids have their own problems and being responsible for the children's welfare, without being accepted as any real authority, to pose upon them, is problem enough. But that is the way it is in the home and at the moment and nothing much can be done about it. Individuals are divided into housework, whatever their qualifications for it, and they are driven to taking care of children, whatever their emotions about them.

One of the maid would do the best for the children she must supervise, she would consider her relationship to the child as a friend and guide, leaving the place of authority to the individual who can exercise it.

Dorothy Dix Says: Points For Parents

By EDITH THOMAS WALLACE

A questionnaire recently was submitted to college and university girls in an effort to ascertain their purposes and ambitions in life. Out of 1,700 replies received, only seven girls said they wanted to be housewives. All of the others aspired to be movie actresses, travel directors, dress designers, journalists, lawyers, doctors, artists or business women. A few admitted that they might eventually marry, but if they did they were firmly determined to make a life out of it and not let a mere husband interfere with their plans.

At first blush this attitude of the young feminine intelligentsia may look discouraging as to the outlook for the future of the race and the home. It may appear that we shall soon have to rely for our population upon primitive hordes of savages reduced to eating in cafeterias. And those who are possible parents of the modern girl anyway, may well view with alarm what looks like a stampede away from domesticated sphere and the repudiation of wifehood and motherhood, which are the ancient and honorable occupations of girls.

But let us calm ourselves. There is no real cause for panic. These school girls who are going to devote their lives to art and the sciences, are not the ones who are cooking breakfast and washing squalling infants, have failed to count the more potent forces in the world, and that is Mother Nature who will presently come along and knock all of their pretty little plans into so many cocked hats.

It is all very well for Eliza to be in a college dormitory and dream of arguing girl, but she is not the Supreme Court and for her to shoulder as she imagines being one of the wives who live in the city-by-the-sea and who have to budget the market money and think twice before they go to the market. It is all very well for Jane who has scraped all her life with her mother over what she should wear and where she shall go, and when she shall get back, to think up the idea that as soon as she is married her husband will have her own little apartment with her own bath and never be forced enough to put herself in a position where any man can boss her.

Then just about the time Eliza and Jane get started in and in a while realize their dreams and bring along Tom and Dick and Harry and they forget all about their plans and aspirations.

A bungalow with open plumbing and stationary wash tub, like a preambulator in the front hall, with a man coming in to drop suddenly looks better to them than anything else on earth and becomes the object of their supreme desire. So nobody need live any step beyond the bungalow, let alone the girls have announced their intention to turn their backs upon matrimony and housewifery. They will fall in love and get married and have babies, just as mothers and their grandmothers did before them.

The thing that I find disquieting in the results to this questionnaire is that marriage has few attractions for the girls who are not in love and still have full possession of their faculties. In fact, they seem to be in a hurry to get out of it. Out of the 1,700 girls who were asked what they intended to do only seven were optimistic enough to think that they might get good husbands and be happy though married.

The remainder did not see anything alluring in marriage. They had seen it at close range in their homes and among their friends. They observed nothing in the faces of their mothers and their sisters and their friends that made them want to go and do likewise. So this questionnaire makes something, it shows that if we want girls to regard marriage as the greatest of all pleasures, we must make it more attractive to them.

Evening clothes give a girl a beautiful head of hair a chance to show off her crowning glory. Needless to say, it will be brushed and illuminated until it shines. Whether she washes it before or after she goes to bed, she will have her locks as before a shampoo, but she will take extra care in its arrangement. If she has small, pliant features, she will use a hair cream with streaked curls to hold it in place. Hair loquacious and loose will be styled with a few more bobby pins, and she will be ready to go. Dark hair looks lovely with blue, green ornaments and pearls set off golden curls, but blond or brunette hair, even when not completely loose, also appears her curls with perfume, preferably a scent with plenty of orange to improve her dancing partners.

What To Do

My employer is very strict, rarely, if ever, speaks to me and I don't feel whether I should try to overcome this by being extra nice or whether I should treat him the same way he treats me. I don't know what to do.

Answer—Few things are worse for office discipline than too much emotion. You are not to be friendly with the staff and employees. I don't mean that your employer should be unkind for from that I think pleasant manners are the requisite of any gentleman, and I am not an admirer of stiffness. But I should not want you to use any method or act to please other than to be engaged and interested.

To teach your chief to respect your business to teach him, and good manners. My advice is to keep your position, do the work you were engaged to do, and be a good girl. Don't let him know how much you love him, but let him know how much you love your work. If you are dignified and dignified, you will make yourself valuable to him and he will be able to manage his own affairs.

Such a wealth of up-to-the-minute information was noted by leading doctors, scientists and dietitians recently. For a few days I shall try to pass along some of the high points.

Inasmuch as we are becoming more and more aware that the average diet does not provide optimum amounts of the B vitamins for grade A health, we'll lead off with a consideration of the discussion by Dr. Norman Jelliffe, assistant professor of clinical medicine at New York University and chief of the medical service at Bellevue hospital, in one of the foremost authorities on the B complex.

Because of the widespread use of refined flours and cereals coupled with the excessive use of sugar, candy, alcohol and soft drinks, Dr. Jelliffe maintains that only a small safety margin in the B vitamins is afforded by the average diet. There is an impressive list of the vitamins B factors—and its growing steadily in length and importance. But if the diet is deficient in one, it is likely to be deficient in the other.

Dr. Jelliffe is convinced that a serious vitamin B deficiency is to be suspected among low income groups, persons with nervous food, diarrhoea, and alcoholism. Alcohol contains no vitamin B, and its excessive use is followed, he points out, the amount of vitamin B absorbed is not sufficient to lower the vitamin-calorie ratio significantly. In addition, the smaller consumption of high vitamin foods, there may be an impaired utilization of the vitamin.

While the symptoms attributed to a vitamin B deficiency are legion, the most definite is a neuritis, of which the most noticeable effects are loss of appetite, fatigue and insomnia. The associated symptoms range from irritability to gas, constipation, depression and weakness. As one who put it, "The fat is on any body is lucky to be a fat man."

Big Tom Turkey Is Best Buy For Any Family

By MRS. GAYNOR MADON

For the past 10 years our turkey has been getting bigger and bigger. Since agricultural colleges and turkey breeders have co-operated to produce a larger bird, you can now buy a larger turkey than ever before.

This year big turkeys, ranging from 12 to 18 pounds, are the best buy. The smaller sizes, 8 to 12 pounds, will be harder to get and cost more.

Invest in a large tom turkey, even though your family is not large. Well-refrigerated, cooked turkeys keep well and you can use it all in delicious specialties. The flavor and tenderness of a large young turkey is equal to that of a small hen turkey and the difference in price per pound will surprise your food budget. Large tom turkeys are better and are easier to roast than hen turkeys, therefore they can be sold on the market at lower prices.

One of the most important turkeys in the country today is this advice to the housewife. Look at the turkey carefully. Remember you are buying turkey meat. Get a bird with a large proportion of meat in comparison with bone. Small bones and skin are waste. That's what you want! Be sure there must be some fat. Fat turkey fat improves the flavor of the meat.

Get a young bird. You can let youth in a turkey by the softness of its meat, not by its size. The lowest bone of a young turkey is soft. That's the best way to get a perfect turkey, our expert says, "a to have faith in your butcher. Buy only from a reliable butcher, one who wants to keep your trade and good will. Tell him exactly what you want and he will select the right bird for you. He knows more about turkeys than you can ever learn. That's his business."

Aft-Section Of Margaret After Fatal Collision With Merchant Ship

Taken from the deck of the merchant ship which rammed and sank the Canadian destroyer Margaret, this picture shows the aft-section of the destroyer a few minutes before it sank. The fore-section of the destroyer sank immediately after the collision, carrying 143 sailors to their deaths.

Seventeen Members Of Foundered Pulp Carrier's Crew Rescued

Try Promotor

Chief defendant in what may prove one of the nation's most spectacular fraud cases, Howard C. Hogen, founder and controlling figure of the vast Associated Gas and Electric utilities system, is pictured at his trial in New York federal court. Hogen is accused of mail fraud and conspiracy to steal the $1,600,000,000 utilities empire of more than 320,000,000.

Seventeen members of the crew of the pulp carrier Novadoc were rescued by a fishing tug after the boat went aground on the Lake Michigan shore in one of the worst gales to sweep the Great Lakes in years. Two members of the Novadoc's crew were swept overboard as the ship struck a reef. Her hull broken and with her deck works and superstructure crated with ice, the Novadoc is shown, above, while rescued members of her crew are shown, below, gathered around the shore in the Peabody coast-guard station. Eighteen Great Lake's sailors are known to have perished in the gale and four vessels are still missing with crews totalling 69.

Canadian Blue-Jackets Rescue 118 From Torpedoed Ships

Canadian blue-jackets are shown, right, as they carried injured sailors at an English port after their destroyer had saved 118 persons from two merchant ships torpedoed by a Nazi U-boat. The ward room of the destroyer was turned into a temporary hospital to treat the injured passengers and crew of the torpedoed vessels. Among those picked up by the destroyer was Mrs. Louis Smook, left, wife of a Dutch Air Force officer. Torpedoed two weeks after their marriage in England Mrs. Smook and her husband were both injured. Mrs. Smook is an English girl and met her husband while he was serving with the Dutch forces in England.

Defenders Of Convoy Arrive In Canadian Port

Seven survivors of the British merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, which was lost down in defending a convoy against German raiders, on their arrival at a Canadian port. They are, left to right, George Squares, George Baxby, Dublin Gorman, Wayne Stevens, R. Margison, John T. Smith and Ernest Muzzo.

"Tiger's" Kin

Annette Chennouau, daughter-in-law of George Chennouau, "The Tiger of France in World War days, photographed in her arrival at New York from France.

Windsors Hear Of Mariners' Ordeal

Rev. Widdowson, left, and Robert Bagnall, believed to be the sole survivors of the British freighter Anglo Boston, are shown telling their dramatic story to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor at the Nassau hospital where they are recuperating. Tapscott and Widdowson spent 30 days floating about the Atlantic in an open boat after the Anglo Boston was torpedoed off the Azores. They and their boats were machine-gunned, and that many of their comrades were killed or later died of wounds. The two survivors were 36 days without food and eight days without water before they were picked up and landed at Nassau. Each lost over 80 pounds in weight.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

By Maurice Dekobra and Leyla Giorgio

THIS was a pointed weapon jerked upward, as if pulled by strings. A bullet slugged its way harmlessly into the ceiling. The bulky enemy agent collapsed convulsively, his legs folding under him before he pitched forward and lay still.

Dick's big angular frame appeared out of the lightning dawn. "Hello, there," he called cheerily. He bent over the dead man for an instant. "You had it rather taken him alive. Couldn't you?" He then, under the circumstances, a mean customer.

Brinda, suddenly knew what Dick Malen said, so he was happy to be alive.

"Oh," Dick said. "Oh, Dick. Then, somehow, she was in his hands. The Squire coughed. "Someone coming," he warned.

It was the constable. He approached cautiously. "Oh," he said, on viewing the door-way. "You got another?"

"Where's your prisoner?" asked Dick sharply.

"It was 'oping you seen 'em," said the constable. "I got away."

With his good hand, Sir John again crumpled the report he had just finished reading. Against Dr. MacDonald's advice, he had returned to London on hearing of Brinda's adventure. A long-since suspected his injured arm, Sir John's face was white with fatigue, but his eyes shone brightly at the news.

He addressed his orderly, hovering nearby. "Tell my niece to come here at once."

"Yes, sir."

During the brief wait, the Lieutenant Colonel pointed out a teatime, lawyer, took up a pen, and began to write. He had just laid the pen down when Brinda arrived.

"Brinda! What on earth are you doing here? Why aren't you in bed?"

"Sir John applied a blister to what he had just written."

"For an excellent reason, my child. I have deposed MacDonald of the chance to drop me with no contrived poison. This is a most important thing to attend to."

"I am afraid you may not like it," he said, looking at Brinda. "I have heard her the last day. Brinda looked at it uncomprehendingly for a moment, then she said she exclaimed, "Why, it is a passport."

"Exactly," said Sir John. "Alan, your visa—now for Portugal, one for the United States."

"But—," Brinda started to keep the tremor out of her voice. "I don't understand, Harold, why, why?"

"Sir John's last jaw tightened. "Set down. Of course, you don't understand. I explain."

In short, cold analysis, he told her. It was not his intention to reach her. But she seemed to have a grasp for getting into his grasp. He was a serious and delicate situation. First,

At EATON'S Tuesday!

Britain is maintaining its export trade to finance its war effort. The British Navy is keeping trade routes open — for imports of cotton from America and wool from the British Empire, for example — and for exports of British made goods to the world.
